

This is a hint that I learned from the amazing Karen Benson and I am so grateful for it!

As a member of AOSA, you have access to the video library that has oodles of videos from presenters presenting at conference on about any topic you can think of. Check it out here: <https://aosa.org/resources/video-library/>

On staff development days while everyone is discussing test scores or reading and math strategies, this is a perfect time for us to watch one of these videos to pick up some strategies to implement right away in our classrooms. Ask your principal in advance if there is a time during the staff development agenda that you can access the AOSA video library to receive some music specific professional development, Offer to write a reflection on how you will use what you watched in your classroom or some new strategies that you would like to try. Each video is about an hour long and there are so many great presenters that you have access to. Not an AOSA member yet? Sign up here: <https://member.aosa.org/login>
