

Teaching with Love and Logic

by Jim Fay & David Funk

Amanda Weddel - Falling Waters Elementary
amanda.weddel@gmail.com

I was assigned to read this book in college, and I remember really enjoying it. After having classroom management challenges accompanied by switching schools and COVID, I decided it was time to read this again.

I really love how in the love and logic mentality, they encourage the student to do a lot of the thinking. This really helped me keep the stress and emotions on the student rather than absorbing them.

Love and Logic also really helped with forming relationships. Obviously one of the main components is love, and caring about your students, even when they make mistakes, can really help form relationships. I find that this helps even with the students whom you need to form relationships with the most.

If you'd rather not read, I do know that their website offers some audio lessons as well.